
Some people may find this strange, but the joy of watching TV and movies, while we're sleeping is because we can learn many things about their characters and their lifestyle. Like what do they like to watch? What foods do they like? What kind of career do they want? How much money does it take for them to get by each month? How old are they really? And so on. This is where a certain type of application called an antideepfreeze comes into play. These apps usually can be found online and will save us from having to go through pages and pages just reading whatever the main character did that day or what was on their mind that week. Instead, if one happens to download an antideepfreeze app, they will be able to go through the contents of their entire mind. They are usually downloadable onto anything from an iPhone, Android phone or any type of tablet. You set up a profile with your information in it, then you start choosing the person you want to read about in detail. The reading itself is done in chapters and sometimes has chapters inside of chapters which can be called subchapters. This particular antideepfreeze app is called the News Antideepfreeze by "Press Release" and it features a young woman who likes to sleep instead of watch TV. This is because she wants to learn more about her brain and basically sleep for days on end. There are many types of people that may download this type of application. There are those that have insomnia, have trouble falling asleep, have mental health issues or just simply want to find out more information about someone they don't know well. For instance, if one is a werewolf, they will be able to read the thoughts of their werewolf mind. On the other hand, if you happen to be a vampire who doesn't like mirrors, you can read the thoughts of their vampire mind instead. There are almost too many things to list here but let's move on. The News Antideepfreeze is a compilation of a girl who goes by the name of Dina and she is a college graduate in dressage who is also a heavy sleeper. She lives in a one bedroom apartment, makes around $5 per hour and has been sleeping for almost 8 years. In the sense that she sleeps from 10pm to 6am every day, she has been doing this for 8 years straight. In her mind, she believes that this will allow her to get away from all sorts of media and distractions in order to become more focused on life itself. Dina likes things like books, science fiction movies and certain types of music. The ants that she likes in her mind are ants, in the sense that she is antsy in the morning when she is getting ready for work. Here's what she has to say about her mind: "I also dislike clothes shopping, buying clothes and name brands. I also dislike orange juice or anything with corn syrup in it. I like learning new things and trying them out on myself. I enjoy learning about different religions, philosophy, psychology etc." Dina obviously finds herself sleeping extra hours each day so that the rest of us don't miss out on all her valuable thoughts. You'd think that she would be eating or playing video games or watching TV during those times but no, not at all.
